HUMAN GEOGRAPHY

Our Human Geography list encompasses the most important global challenges we currently face. Engaging in thoughtful, critical and practical ways and tackling key issues including inequality, population growth, climate change, resource threats and sustainable urban development worldwide.

Our readership includes students, researchers, practitioners and policy makers and we welcome new proposals from specialist research monographs to topical titles for a wider audience and new book series that look towards the future global landscape.

If you are interested in writing for our Human Geography list, please contact the Senior Commissioning Editor for the subject area at emily.watt@bristol.ac.uk or visit our website to browse our Author Hub and to download our proposal guidelines.

Meet the editor

Emily Watt,
Senior Commissioning
Editor

At the centre of Bristol University Press is a strong social mission to promote positive social change in all sorts of areas and for me, the exciting part of commissioning is talking to authors and seeing a project grow from a conversation into the greatest book it can be.
