Bristol studies in East Asian International Relations

Series Editors: Yongjin Zhang, University of Bristol, UK, Shogo Suzuki, The University of Manchester, UK and Peter Markus Kristensen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

Bristol Studies in East Asian International Relations is a major new series that combines original research and theoretical innovation to provide fresh insights into the changing international politics of East Asia and into International Relations theory.

East Asia is now arguably the most dynamic and consequential region in world politics, not least because of the rise of China. As a key driver of global growth, East Asia has generated a dramatic shift in power dynamics, which accompanied by the increasing strategic rivalry between the United States and China has created new challenges for governing the regional – and global – political economy.
