Ageing in a Global Context

Series Editors: Chris Phillipson, The University of Manchester, UK, Toni Calasanti, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, US and Thomas Scharf, Newcastle University, UK

"Our increasing longevity will profoundly impact every aspect of our lives. This fascinating series from some of the key thinkers in this field will contribute to our understanding of what should happen next."

David Sinclair, International Longevity Centre UK

Published in association with the British Society of Gerontology, this major series addresses broad cross-cutting issues around ageing in a global society. The books present innovative perspectives, reflecting a balance of topics across the Global South and North, that will transform debate in this fast-moving field.

Ageing has been conventionally framed within the boundaries of nation states. This book is the first to apply theories of globalisation to gerontology, allowing readers to understand the implications of growing older in a global age.

Call for proposals

Books in the series should comprise high quality research on broad, cutting-edge issues surrounding ageing in today's global societies. They should provide innovative perspectives in gerontology, reflecting a balance of topics across the Global South and North to assist scholars, students, professionals and policy makers responding to demographic change and offer a major contribution to the direction of studies in ageing.
